

People pay to work with you

People who have probably spent forty plus hours working at another job will surround you. They pay you with their time. Respect them by managing it well.

Because they're working for free there has to be some personal gain for them in the process. Having fun while feeling valued and important is a great trade for their time. For people to feel part of something imaginative is truly unique. This may be their only creative outlet.